A close-up photograph of a wooden bowl tilted to the left, spilling a variety of dried nuts onto a dark wooden surface. The nuts include almonds, hazelnuts, and possibly pecans or walnuts, some in their shells and some shelled. The lighting is warm and focused on the nuts, creating a rich, golden-brown color palette. The text "Dried Nuts" is overlaid in the center in a bold, white, sans-serif font, framed by two thin white horizontal lines.

A detailed collage of various seeds and grains. At the top center, there are several stalks of golden wheat. Below them, a pile of light-colored, oval-shaped seeds (possibly millet or quinoa) is visible. To the left, there's a dark, textured pile of small, round seeds (likely chia). To the right, there's a pile of reddish-brown, elongated seeds (possibly flax). In the bottom center, there's a large pile of colorful, round seeds in shades of green, red, and orange (possibly lentils or beans). To the right of this, there's a pile of light-colored, elongated seeds (possibly almonds or cashews). The word "Seeds" is written in a large, white, sans-serif font, centered over the collage, with a thin white horizontal line above and below it.
